Bo'ness is a increasingly popular town located on the southern shores of the Firth of Forth, approximately 17 miles from Edinburgh, 7 from Falkirk and 33 from Glasgow. Indeed, the town is ideally placed for commuters throughout the central belt via the M8 and M9. Historic Linlithgow (3 miles) also offers a main line rail link to Edinburgh and Glasgow and a number of towns in between. A strong community, the town itself plays host to an annual children's fair festival as well as numerous other events throughout the year including a weekly foreshore parkrun. The oldest cinema in Scotland, historic Kinneil House, grounds and Museum, Blackness Castle, a Motor Museum and a Railway Museum all attract visitors from far and wide. There are numerous cafes, restaurants and bars, as well as large branches of both Tesco and Lidl. The local schools cater for children from nursery through to senior level.
